«IMPOSTE is the name of the fixed or opening independent upper part of a door or window. It often allows light to pass through.»
This choice of name comes from the small glazed area that crowns the workshop door.

To compensate for the increasingly alienating and restrictive social networks algorithms, promoting the accelerated video format a little more each day (and therefore also epileptic seizures) to light content (pseudo-DIY for neo-ecos, arts'n'crafts for idle people, disheartened kittens for love-starved singles, body-built nude artists for body-building galleries, and so on...), I choose not to let myself drown in this ocean of 2.0 mediocrity, and without going to war, I still take up arms.

There's no question of me fighting with theirs though, ahah, no! My battlefield will always be paper, and everyone will have experienced that when it's badly taken on the edge, it can cut. Far be it from me to incise your phalanxes, no, no, but I hope that by doing so I can, freely and always, continue to serve on the razor's edge, a content that works to keep itself sharp...

And so it is with knife in hand that I begin this first issue ... by slicing cheeses.
 That's right! We're once again swapping our local Saint-Nectaire for a croc de Munster, and please give me 3 slices, because spring and its sweet frangrances will refine in the East, for 3 weeks. ▶

20/04/24 :: «MICRO-TRUC» - Kulturfabrik, Esch-sur-Alzette (LU)

At the crossroads of Belgium, France and Germany, Luxembourg was once upon a time: Having arrived in Meurthe et Moselle (54) in mid-April, we no longer had to make the splits to get our foot in the door (in Lux). So, last November, we jumped feet together at the call from Kulturfabrik (cultural center - LU) to participate in their first program featuring a meeting of micro-publishing and micro-brewing under the concise name of "Micro-Truc".

There could be no better way to express the fact that our work is somewhat indefinable on the one hand, and that "small press" activities in this high country are still quite timid, on the other.

- For real, I'm trying to be witty, but the idea of going into unexplored territory (as much by my feet as by the small edition) is subject to euphoria ... -

Let's keep a cool head and make a date! in the form of speed-dating:

19, 20, 21/04/24 :: «ZINE À METZ» - La Dame Jeanne, Metz (57 - FR)

In parallel with the "Le Livre à Metz" festival, and in less time than it takes to read it, the "Zine à Metz" event was organized by the association Mauvaises Impressions.

La Dame Jeanne will be the ideal venue, as this self-described "bar à cuite et burgers" (hangover and burgers bar) will, for 3 days, be the place to be for emerging margins and blotchy ink.

On the menu: exhibitions and distros.

27 & 28/04/24 :: «LaBD» - Hangar B9, Liège (BE)

True, this tour of the East extends somewhat into the Benelux countries, but if Avignon constitutes "the North" for the people of Marseille, then Liège may well be "the East" when from Auvergne.

So we're making a detour to Belgium and stopping off in Liège for the biannual LaBD meeting, where the memory of 2022 still reveals some emotional glitter... #poetry

04 & 05/05/24 :: «RAYON VERT» -
Centre Saint-Michel, Volkrange (57 - FR)

...And we'll be dropping the last anchor of this excursion where we hope to be able to board a flying saucer right away:

The "Rayon Vert" - festival of comics and fantasy - also welcomes a number of "out of the box" authors who I'll have the pleasure of joining during first weekend in May.

And after that, we'll have to get back home.

From 22/04/24 :: EXHIBITION @Hisler BD, Metz - visible 1 mth.

Also invited to "take over the walls" of the Hisler BD bookshop, my mini-exhibition from the "ZINE à METZ" weekend will be transported and undoubtedly "augmented" from Monday April 22 in the store, and will remain in the Messin bath for another month. | <https://www.facebook.com/hislerbdlib>
